

MODERN LOVE
S1E3

SARAH

I really thought we'd get to the end somehow, right? I mean, I really did, but I hate who I am with you now. I catch myself sometimes looking at you, and I'm just waiting for you to fuck up. It's just...It just seems easier to be you. And... I envy you. I, I envy your life and how you get to be. It just looks like a lot more fun. I know there's things that you worry about, too, but...they seem like small things, and I get to carry around all the big heavy shit, and you just let me do it. You just let me take that role because I'm good at it. Maybe I don't want to be good at it, you know? Maybe I never wanted that role. Maybe you never cared enough about me to stop and ask me if I wanted it. I think you push me away. I think you've always pushed me away from your life and the fun stuff and...Like, you never ask me to come out with you to your parties or premieres or...like I wouldn't like it, like, "Oh, I hate those people 'cause they're such assholes" and I'm so sensible." I think you tried to separate me from the fun stuff in your life because you knew if you saw me there, if you saw me in it, you would realize that that's where I should be. And then you'd have to feel bad about it. You made it impossible for me to be a part of your life, Dennis, so don't act surprised when I say that we have nothing in common, because you engineered that.